JOHN A. HAYES,

Should Protect the Birds.

The Barnwell People makes the timely suggestion that the "school teachers educate their pupils this fall to spare the smaller birds, the farmer's largest friends." Emphasis is being given the fact that these little creatures do play so important a part in the agricultural pursuits of this country by the effort of Miss Gould to find a bird that will prove an enemy to the boll weevil, she going on the theory that every insect is preyed upon by some bird. The increase in the insects that destroy the farmer's growing crops is in proportion to the decrease in the number of the birds that would feed upon them. If a farmer is to be protected against the ravages of these multiplied insects he must stay thewanton slaying of the little birds thatis taking place all over the

The proper place to teach this very important lesson is in the home and in the school. By the reading of a few selections bearing upon this important subject, and by making use of many facts that the average child already knows, the teacher can do much to awaken an interest in the pupils. Nor should they fail to emphasize the further fact that this wanton slaying of birds should not be carried on on account of the wrongfulness of the habit. This is making the very highest appeal that can be made, and every teacher should see to it that the pupils are given the right kind of teaching along this line. The teaching of a child a great moral lesson such as kind treatment of helpless and harmless little birds, and animals, if or as much importance as the teaching of how to add and multiply-yea, of much more importance.-Winnsboro News and Herald.

Died With Hand's Clasped.

Richmond, Va., Oct. 13.-Miss Bessie Stone and Robert Gill, who eloped from Ashland Tuesday, were found dead with their hands clasped near a pond in that vicinity today by a searching party. A bullet hole in the head of each told the story of supposed double suicide or murder and suicide. Miss Stone was shot behind the ear and Gill in the forehead. Gill had taken off his coat and yest. The indications are that he killed the girl and then killed himself. Miss Stone left a letter for her parents in which she declared that she had never done anything amiss or that she would have been ashanied for the world to know, and that the reason for agreeing to die was that her health was not good and that, not being allowed to love her aweetheart, life was an utter blank to her. She asked that she be buried in the same grave with her lover, a request which it is understood will be complied. She asked also that the pistol by which she met her death should lie on her coffin until the burial service, and that at the funeral it be taken in, instead of flowers, by the honorary pall bearer. Young Gill also left is letter.

Colonels in Dixie.

It was stated in our news columns gesterday that the local camp of the Army of Tennessee of Confederate Veterans to-day passed a resolution abolishing in its camp all titles borne by its members except those which were won in the Confederate service, and calling on other camps and the United Confederate Veterans to discourage in a similar manner the promiscuous use of such titles as "general," "colonel," "major" and "captain" when the bearers of the titles were not entitled to them from a military point of view.

That may be a commendable movenent, but it will not be successful. It is a curious characteristic of human nature that men not only love to wear titles, but love to bestow them, and whenever a man has procured, by whatsoever means, a title it clings to dog. Once a colonel always a colonel, you-" unless the colonel be promoted to be

There are some men in every community who seem to the public to be entitled to a title, and sconer or later the title will be bestowed, regardless of formalities. Some men are called captain and others colonel and others general, regardless of any military service, and others are called Judge, whether or not they are by law entitled to that designation. The people rule and they will bestow their titles upon whom they will.

Several years ago in one of the Virginia towns there was a kind-hearted man whom everybody called "Uncle Billy." One day another citizen, upon whom the community had by common consent and most worthily conferred the title of colonel, asked Uncle Billy how it was he came by that sobriquet. "Well," said Uncle Billy, in reply, "I suppose I got my title as you got yours-some darn fool started it and all the rest of the folks took it up." Non disputandum applies to titles as surely as it applies to tastes.-Richmond, Va., Times-Dispatch.

The Trouble.

"Do you know of the only Irishman who ever committed suicide?" asked W. B. Pollard, of Jersey City, who was at the Fifth Avenue hotel last night. "You know it is said that Irishmen never commit suicide, and when the argument was advanced in a crowd of that nationality he was so unstrung that he decided to show his opponents that Irishmen do sometimes commit a rash act. He accordingly disappeared, and the man who had employed him started a search. When he got to the barn he looked up toward the rafters and saw his man hanging with a rope around his waist.

"What are you up to, Pat?" he asked.

Irishman replied. "Why don't you put it around your neck?" "Faith, Oi did, but Oi couldn't braythe," was the unsmiling reply of the man from the Emerald Isle.

No Girl Babies in This Family.

A remarkable condition in the family of Capt. Roesch, master of the barkentine Wrestler, is reported to exist. Female children are absolutely unknown to the men of the family. According to a story told while Capt. Roesch was here with his vessel discharging lumber, for generations back every child born to the family has been a male.

Capt. Roesch of the Wrestler is one of four brothers. He has three children and all of them are boys. One of his brothers had 14 children and another had nine children. All of them were boys. These boys have also married and have families, but in every instance the children have been males. It no recent instance has a female child been born to the men of the Roesch line. Capt. Roesch says that this remarkable phenomenon has existed for generations in his family He says that it has come to be a fam ily tradition that a girl child is never born to the name of Roesch.-Hawai

His Love Letters.

Many men able to write excellen letters fail lamentably when they at tempt to compose anything else The relatives of one such hampered person complained, not without rea son, of the extreme brevity of hi home letters.

"But," pleaded the offender, "yo know very well that I never coul write much of a letter."

"You write long enough ones t your betrothed," asserted the aggriev ed sister. "Sometimes she has t pay extra postage on them."

The engaged girl, who was present laughed and blushed; then she rushe to the rescue: "He just puts 'I love you,' at the top of each page," she exclaimed, "and fills all the space beneath with ditto marks."-Exchange. - A glove isn't much good unless

Then it was Auntie Who Spoke.

An Eighth avenue car was bowling along uptown when a gust of wind unceremoniously lifted a straw hat from the head of one of the male passengers and sent it whirling down a side street, says the New York Press.

"Oh, look auntie," exclaimed a small boy on the seat behind, as he nudged the woman next to him and pointed at the hatless and bald-pated passenger: "That man's lost his hat. Why don't he stop the car and go after it?"

"I don't know, dear," replied the woman, "unless it is that the straw hat season is over and the gentleman doesn't mind losing it."

"Well, auntie, is your hat on good and tight?"

"Yes, dear, why do you ask?" "'Cause if it blowed off it might take your wig along with it, and then him as a bad name clings to a bad you'd look just like the man wouldn't

> But at this point the little boy's auntie whispered something in his car that made him stop suddenly, sit up straight and stop talking.

> > Went Under.

In a Virginia town the aged pastor of one of the churches fell ill. He was beloved by all the neighborhood, and a constant stream of anxious friends rang the bell to make inquiries. The nurse in charge was an intelligent negro woman, and she decided to issue bulletins at frequent intervals. She wrote them herself and pinned them to the front door, and this is the way they read as they appeared successively:

"Re . Blank am very sick." "Later-Rev. Blank am worse." "Night-Rev. Blank am sinking. "Morning-Rev. Black have sunk. -Washington Post.

A Comment.

"During a southern tour," said John D. Rockefeller, Jr., "I attended church one Sunhay morning in a quaint little wooden meeting house where the pews were of unpainted pine boards.

"The minister was a good man, a sincere man, a really eloquent man, but he had contracted somewhere an unfortunate habit of bellowing. He bellowed like a bull. His voice shook the rafters. The sound overwhelmed the sense and it was often impossible for the noise, to get at the man's meaning.

"He was especially loud during the prayer. I never heard such an uproar as filled the little building while this southern minister prayed. After he was through, a little girl on my left gave a sigh of relief and I heard her whisper to her father:

"'Father, don't you think that if he lived nearer to God he wouldn't have to talk so loud.' "
